FROM MAY 18. TO MAY 25. 1738.

VIENNA, February 15.

THE Court has received Advice from the Frontiers of Servia and Bosnia, that the Imperial Detachments continue to make very successful Incursions in those Parts, and that one of them which was sent out from Sabatch, return'd with 17 Waggons and 15 Boats laden with Provisions, which they carried off from the Turks. We talk now with more Certainty than ever of making another Campaign against the Turks; and in all Probability it will be attended with Success, considering the Circumstances of the Turks; their Army has been greatly diminished by the Plague, and other Distempers. The Troops which they brought out of Asia and Africa have also suffer'd severely this Winter; besides which, the Porte having resolved to undertake the Siege of Oczakow again, and designing to employ in it some of the Troops that are in the Neighbourhood of the Danube, we shall find it easier to penetrate into the Enemy's Country than it was last Campaign.

DUBLIN, Feb. 14. Early on Saturday Morning last, Col. John Archer, shot himself through the Head, at his Lodgings in Dame street. He serv'd in Spain, as Lieut. Col. in General Wade's Regiment, which now belongs to Col. Dalzell on this Establishment, and had been Agent to several Regiments, but at present had the Right Hon. the Lord Viscount Molesworth's Regiment of Dragoons, and the Hon. Col. Thomas Wentworth's Regiment of Foot.

As a true and exact Account of the Manner of his Death has not been printed we think it might not be improper to insert it here, which is as follows,

About ten Days before this unhappy Affair, he had a Case of Pistols brought from his Country House, and clean'd by a Gunsmith, and sent his Servant for Six pennyworth of Powder, and on Monday or Tuesday last, for Two pennyworth of Bullets, and told him, that in a few Days he intended to go into the Country. The Pistols lay on his Table some Nights before, and on Friday Night he came home to his Lodgings between the Hours of eight and nine o'Clock, had his Fire made up, and about Ten sent to the Tavern for a Pint of Wine, as he was accustomed. About four or five o'Clock in the Morning, those that lay in the Room over him were awaken'd by a Noise, but at that Time could not imagine what or where it was, and about half a Quarter of an Hour after, a second Noise, and a third in about a Quarter more, they continued waking till between six and seven, when the fourth and last was heard, upon which they immediately arose and enquired whether any of the Family heard a Noise, but neither those that lay under the Colonel, or on the same Floor, heard any thing of it; they then desir'd the Maid to ask the Colonel when he arose, if he was disturb'd; she went up and made his Fire as usual, but dusting the Room observ'd several drops of Blood, and when she came down, said she supposed the Colonel had cut his Finger; some of the Family went to the Room immediately, which was about eight o'Clock, and having track'd the Blood to the Closet Door where he lay, they sent for the Boy that attended him, and bid him see whether his Master was well, when he opened the Chamber Door he came out in a Fright, and said the Cloaths were off the Bed's Foot, and there was a strong Smell; he went a second Time and opened the Curtains, and saw him lying in a most terrible Condition on his Left Side, his Skull broke, and his Brains and a vast Quantity of Blood about his Head and Pillow; he had one Pistol fast in his Right Hand, and the other lay in a Chair by him. The two first Pistols he discharged are supposed to have quite missed him, and the third to have only grazed him; some Drops of Blood fell on the Paper where the Powder lay, and others on the Floor, by which it was traced to his Chamber; the fourth Pistol he discharged lying on his Left Side in Bed, holding the Pistol against his Temple to prevent its missing him.

He left a Will signed the 12th of January last, and the Day before his Death wrote five or six Letters, sealed and directed to very worthy Gentlemen, and left them in his Escritore: The Substance of which is, as we hear, Thanks for Services and Kindnesses received; a Concern that his Circumstances in this Life would not admit him to live longer for the Service of his Friends; that he was going to quit the Malice of this World, and throw himself at the Mercy of the next, and subscribed himself their unhappy Friend John Archer.

ULM, Feb. 23. We have begun to question the Burgher-Master Harsdorffer, concerning the Motives which induced him to commit so desperate an Action, as to kill the Burgher-Master Besserer in the Council; and he has given three Reasons for it, which have been found very weak: The first is, that he observ'd the Burgher-Master Besserer made it his Study to vex him upon all Occasions, that he has been grievously offended and insulted by him, and that he has kept a Journal of all the Injuries he received from him for these ten Years past; the second Reason he alledges is, that M. de Besserer oppos'd him when he was making Interest for the Post of Burgher-Master; and the third, that he hinder'd him from getting his Son-in-Law received into the City Council. The Publick is very attentive to the Consequences of this Affair.

LONDON, Feb. 18. From Leghorn they write, that a Catalan Bark has brought the Corsicans another Supply of Arms, 30 Barrels of Powder, 40 Barrels of Musket Ball, 380 Pikes, and 30,000 Musket Flints.

A Circular Letter from King Theodore has lately appear'd here, commanding all those inroll'd in his Order of Knights of the Redemption, to repair in the Month of March to the respective Towns and Ports already prescrib'd to them; and each Knight to bring five faithful able-bodied Men along with him. According to the List we have, the greatest Part of those Knights abroad are Swedes, Pruffians, Livonians and Westphalians; in the List are likewise 27 British Subjects, above half of them Irish, and the rest English and Scotch; 31 French, 42 Italians, 17 Spaniards, 9 Poles, 11 Dutchmen, and 7 Greeks of the Morea; amounting mounting in the whole to 400 Knights, all Gentlemen and Men of Service: What Number of Corſicans are in this Order of Knighthood is not ſpecified in the Liſt. Theſe Steps, and the Warlike Preparations carrying on by King Theodore, are more than ſufficient to convince us that he is ſure of the Fidelity and Conſtancy of the Corſicans, in inviolably ſupporting their Election of him, and that neither he nor they will ever depart from the ſolemn Oath mutually taken by them on the Day of his Election at Aleſſani, the 15th of April 1736.

To this we ſhall add, by way of Confirmation, a Paragraph out of a Letter of a very late Date, all in King Theodore's own Hand-writing.

All theſe Accounts, (ſays his Corſican Majeſty) of this great Succour (from France) in Favour of my Enemies, do not damp or diſcourage me in the leaſt. The People are conſtant and faithful to me, they will continue ſo, they are no way cool'd or daunted; and for my Part, you may depend upon it that nothing ſhall ever prevail upon me to abandon them.

CHARLES-TOWN, April 15.

The Government having received freſh Advices, that ſeveral Veſſels have been ſeen at Anchor before St. Auguſtine, proper Meaſures were immediately taken to prevent any Surpriſe, and a well mann'd Sloop is ſent out with one of his Majeſty's Men of War to cruize and get more certain Intelligence of the Deſign of the Spaniards.

By Capt. Prew who arrived here laſt Night, we have the following Information: That he was taken in September laſt at the Havanna by the Spaniards, detain'd and put to cloſe Priſon for the Space of Six Months and Five Days, without being allowed the Liberty to ſpeak to any Body but to the Perſon that brought him Victuals; their Intention was, to employ him as a Pilot in their Deſign againſt Georgia. On the 26th of March laſt he was releaſed and put in the Stocks on board a Man of War of 24 Guns; but two Days before they ſail'd, freſh Orders came from Spain to ſtop their Proceeding: They then diſcharged him, & ſent him in the ſaid Man of War to St. Auguſtine, were they put him on Shoar. At the ſame Time arrived in that Port two Snows, two Ships, one Scooner, and two Sloops with Proviſions, Ammunition and 500 Recruits, which with other Troops from the Havanna, in all 7000 Men, 37 Pinnances and Lances, and 6 half Galleys, then in the ſaid Port, were to be employed in the Expedition againſt Georgia, if theſe contrary Orders had not been ſent.
